Youth Action For the UN Global Goals Being Recognized By The United Nations Association – USA and InnerView Technologies

College and High School Students Earn National Awards For Community Service Impact

CINCINNATI, OH. May 21, 2019 – Students across the country are being recognized by the United Nations Association – USA and InnerView Technologies in the 2018-19 National Community Service Awards for students and schools at both the high school and undergraduate level. This three tier award program celebrates a wide range of activities driving impact from first time actions like volunteering at a food pantry, tutoring, working with seniors and veterans to leadership roles in fundraising, organizing and speaking at events.

“Through positive experiences, peer leadership, community engagement and access to ways to get involved, we can help more individuals get introduced to service opportunities aligned with their passions and experience a personal connection with the UN Global Goals,” says Anna Mahalak, Youth Engagement Manager of United Nations Association – USA. “We believe this program uniquely connects an entire ecosystem of change makers including volunteers, service leaders, development programs, nonprofits, schools and committed businesses to elevate and expand the social impact of volunteer efforts and connection to the UN Global Goals.”

The power of students applying their talents and energy to community service is tremendous. Through this program, thousands of students have invested more than 410,000 community service hours this school year. “Volunteer experiences drive impact to critical community needs, as well as demonstrate character traits, develop skills in human agility, and deliver local progress to global challenges” says Kristine Sturgeon, CEO of InnerView Technologies. A key artifact students gain through this program is the development of a digital service resume for use in job and college applications to demonstrate personal commitment, 21st century skills, and key areas of interest.

For the 2018-19 School Year, students from 188 schools have earned personal recognition for local and global impact. Schools are listed below by state, each student award earner is listed with the primary area of impact at <https://innerview.org/award/members>.
